The Fellowship of Flowers

I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows
Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows
Quite over-canopied with lush woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine.
There sleeps Titania, some time of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight.

—Mid Summer Night's Dream.

Society of American Wars
in the State of Minnesota
Minneapolis

My Dear Companion:

"The Spirit of '76", having failed to carry out its agreement, to publish our proceedings from month to month, none having appeared since September, 1897, the Society does not feel justified in continuing it as our "official organ".

We are now in correspondence with the American Historical Register, of Boston, and other patriotic society journals. Any suggestions that you can give us that will aid in selecting a magazine that will best meet the Society's needs will be duly appreciated.

Fraternally,

EDWARD JUNIUS EDWARDS,
Commander.

February 1, 1898.
